

DREAMING

A BOOK FOR MY DAUGHTER

CHRISTOPHER PERSLEY

FOR MY DAUGHTER WHO SHOULD NEVER STOP DREAMING.

50 Years ago, Dr. King told us about his dream at the historic March on Washington, a high point of the Civil Rights Movement. It was a beautiful dream of acceptance and equality. Your family is a true embodiment of this dream.

I want for you to be able to dream. Remember, there is nothing that can hold you back. Most importantly, be yourself.

What will be your dream?
Will you want to bring people joy through music?

Will you be a reporter
and uncover important and life alerting news stories?

Perhaps you'll dream of being an athlete.

Or an astronaut.

Maybe working with animals will inspire you.

Or cooking wonderful and creative meals as a chef might be your path.

Maybe modeling will pique your interest.

Perhaps you'll choose work less glamorous such as teaching, like your Aunt Lindsay.

Or maybe the noblest work of all as a parent. You certainly have strong mothers in our family to lean on if this is your dream.

What matters most is that you follow your dream. And thanks to Dr. King and many others, you can truly dream of becoming anything.

Go forward and dream,
my child.

Thank you, Dr. King.
